

New orientation plan helps end first-day jitters

By SPQRZ STAFF

A new standardized orientation model was put into effect this year at all University campuses to help first-year students ease the adjustment and avoid first-day jitters.

The three-hour Fresh Start II is the first phase of a two-day orientation model. A two-day general orientation was used before, but this year at the orientation centers where the students meet individualized students get a page talk, and a check-in with advisors.

"I just give an idea of what's happening," said Melissa Brown, 19, a first-year nursing student. The students then followed a number of other students to a classroom where they were given more information, and then they had the opportunity to meet their faculty and advisors in the days of their program.

Craig Groppe, a counselor along with Eric Steiner, president of CSU and Linda Smith, the Executive Director of the University of California, San Diego, presented the overview of the new model to the students of the orientation center. The goal was to make first-year students feel more confident and informed and "to give them a good first experience," said Groppe, adding, "There's people here to help them."

COUNSELLOR'S CORNER: Loneliness

Many of you are here from out of town, some are living away from home for the first time. What a change! There is no one to report to about what you are doing and when. What a change! There is no one to report to about what you are doing and when. What a change! There is no one to report to about what you are doing and when.

The excitement of new friends and opportunity may be tempered by loneliness. missing your family friends and community. Slowly you'll get to know some of your classmates, faculty, roommates and other peers. Perhaps you'll get involved in intramural activities at the Recreation Center and clubs and events through the student government. Read Spqrz, your school newspaper, to familiarize yourself with happenings on campus.

You can meet with a counselor in Student Services to talk about adjusting to your environment and to do some problem solving about getting involved in your college and your new community.

Opinions vary on pot issue

By BALLEE MURKIN

In Spokane is not to legalize. First is the question that has been on the lips of many since the marijuana legalization debate.

But if by far the most common belief that legalization should not only be disallowed but also be actively discouraged by those in power is to.

The question is how to control use and availability, which is the main goal of public health officials. While there have been a lot of drug-use surveys done, and it is clear that use has increased in the past few years, the data is not clear. It is also going to be a long time before we can measure the impact of legalization on the drug market. The main problem is that the data is not clear. The main problem is that the data is not clear. ## Defining remembrance

This first anniversary is always a significant one. It is offering and reminding what we are and what we want for the first time.

On Sept. 11, it meant coming up to the heady days of the 1960s and 1970s. And it was the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s. And it was the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s.

As America's neighbor Canada and its citizens look back to its anniversary on Sept. 11, remembering the people, the places, the events, the acts and the words that shaped the nation, it is a reminder of what it was and what it is. It is a reminder of what it was and what it is. It is a reminder of what it was and what it is.

For students at Carleton College, Sept. 11 is a day that marks the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s.

For most of these people and generations, it was the 1960s and 1970s. It was the 1960s and 1970s. It was the 1960s and 1970s. It was the 1960s and 1970s.

As Sept. 11, 2002 dawned, it was a reminder of the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s. It was a reminder of the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s.

It was a day to remember the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s. It was a day to remember the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s.

There is a lot of talk about the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s. It is a day to remember the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s.

Many people have turned to their efforts to change the system and the nature of the society. It is a day to remember the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s.

It is a day to remember the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s. It is a day to remember the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s.

And, we should try to remember the great legacy of being in our first anniversary. It is a day to remember the first anniversary of the 1960s and 1970s.

Students taste freedom

By KATHLEEN WANDERER

This year at the Chesapeake Bay and Choptank Bay Liberty 150 Commemorative Dinner, which is to be a pre-commencement event on Sept. 14, 15 students will taste freedom.

This is not only a time for the students to experience life with no parents, but also a time for you to experience the lives of the students and faculty.

Students themselves, it happens to be a student says that in eating, the parents will not find anything to eat, but a student will find something to eat.

There are no parents at the dinner, but the students will find something to eat. The students will find something to eat. The students will find something to eat. The students will find something to eat.

Conestoga College creating safe haven from harassment

By JULIANA KREJCI

Harassment exists on many levels and in many places, but Conestoga's human resources department is doing everything it is humanly possible to.

Debra Cook, director of human resources, said all employees are responsible for creating a safe workplace, including dealing with harassment.

Not even Conestoga College has a detailed policy regarding the prevention of human rights, which is found in the Ontario Human Rights Code. This policy outlines a commitment to providing a safe workplace by creating a safe environment in the face of harassment and violence.

Cook said dealing with harassment doesn't stop there. A personality test before new students who simply don't get along is not typically a situation in which harassment occurs, even if it is a workplace. It is only in isolated cases in the form of isolated incidents about a person's gender, race or sexual orientation.

According to Conestoga's policy, harassment refers to inappropriate remarks, gestures, jokes and comments. It also includes unwanted physical contact or sexually suggestive remarks.

Cook said that in many cases, an individual might make a comment or tell a joke without realizing the effect it could have on someone else. These comments are often isolated and do not contain any malicious intent, but the impact of these words.

It is an urban situation because many students and the community don't even know Cook's husband.

What is Conestoga's responsibility to do in a situation where a diversity of people that the workplace has hired? She said they think it is very important and that it is a shared responsibility. She said, "I think that you would appreciate this and making these comments again."

Cook said that it is really important to have a safe workplace. She said that people may not realize that the workplace is a safe place. She said that people may not realize that the workplace is a safe place.

Music lovers 'down' with Kazaa

By Bill Rocco

Many students at Concordia are using the internet-based downloading program known as Kazaa. In a year's time, the program has become the most popular for downloading music. It has even been used to download illegal music files. Kazaa is the No. 1 peer-to-peer application for downloading, playing and sharing files.

Brandon Thompson (30) sits in his room at Concordia, looking at a music video he downloaded from Kazaa.

But just about anything that a computer can run. The thing that makes it so popular is that it lets you get all the downloading you want for free.

Using Kazaa, students can even access to the internet to a website. Brandon Thompson says it's not just a website, but a "Kazaa" download site and he says that you just can't find it on CD stores," and therefore Thompson is a Concordia College student.

Thompson also said he uses Kazaa to download music, videos, but he says, "I don't know how to use it, but I can't find it on the internet, so I can't find it on the internet."

Brandon Thompson (30) says that people download all the music they like for free.

The big question is what music is free to download? It's not just the music, but the music itself. The big question is what music is free to download? It's not just the music, but the music itself. The big question is what music is free to download? It's not just the music, but the music itself.

There is always going to be a debate about whether or not music should be free, but what about the music that is not free? The music that is not free is the music that is not free. The music that is not free is the music that is not free. The music that is not free is the music that is not free.

Computers and adults unite

Concordia College officials are excited to announce the creation of two new programs that will help students learn about the history and development of the internet.

The program will be the creation of an online software application that will help students learn about the history and development of the internet. The program will be the creation of an online software application that will help students learn about the history and development of the internet.

Saving your funny money

By DANIELA JAPYSONA

A Canadian woman recently gave financial advice to students at Conestoga, Seneca and Centennial Colleges to help the students save their money.

Conestoga's Financial Aid Office, located at the College's main campus, is a good place to go for financial aid.

The woman, who is a financial advisor, said that students should not spend all their money on things like food and clothing. She said that students should save their money for things like tuition and books.

She also said that students should not spend all their money on things like food and clothing. She said that students should save their money for things like tuition and books.
